“Big Tree is a genre-bending, five-piece bundle of energy...fresh and quirky.”

- Performing Songwriter Magazine, 03/09

Big Tree is an angular pop band for naturalists. These five good friends have created a sound that taps into organic folk, greasy blues, ambient rock and modal jazz. The pervasive spirit in the sounds they create makes their music vibrant, fresh and alive. The members of Big Tree met studying jazz together at Sarah Lawrence College, and this influence is clear in their ability to musically communicate with one another. Big Tree's appeal comes from the band's diverse musical background. Big Tree loves Radiohead, John Coltrane, Miles Davis, Neil Young, Aretha Franklin, The Band and Tom Waits, to name just a few. Because of this wide variety of influences, Big Tree's musical product is hard to categorize, yet immediately appealing: infectious pop music splashed with colorful harmonies, driven by pulsing rhythms, chock full of poetic and quirky imagery, all situated in rich and diverse sonic landscapes.
